A Granville man died and a woman was injured in a single-vehicle roll-over crash Thursday near Cedar Point.

Joel J. Rangel was identified as the man who died by La Salle County Coroner Rich Ploch in a news release sent Friday.

Ploch said authorities were called to North 23rd and East First roads near Cedar Point. A car overturned and two occupants were ejected from the vehicle.

"A female occupant was transferred from the scene to a hospital for treatment," Ploch said in the release. "The other male occupant was pronounced dead at the scene at 3:20 a.m."

A forensic investigative autopsy was conducted, with preliminary results indicating that the man died of injuries from the crash.

alongside his art. In addition to his graphic illustrations, his acrylic work is also quite appealing. It is softer and more colorful than his graphic work, but it is stylish and beautiful as well.

Penny Boedigheimer is a retired law enforcement officer who was classically trained as an artist at Northern Illinois University. Boedigheimer's work often presents a stylized vision of her world as a police officer. She integrates material related to her previous profession into artwork. Her work encompasses all mediums but her specialty in this exhibit are pieces formed from bullet casings and thematically related to law enforcement issues.

Penny Guynn's pour art creates forms of textures that flow colorfully into one another, forming patterns out of which emerge subtle images.

Ryan Stanley began her creative journey with simple graphite drawings that she later parlayed into graphic images that have been used as tattoo designs for numerous tattoo parlors in the Midwest. She has expanded her artistic offerings by creating colorful acrylic abstracts and mixed media pieces.

Samuel Dickey is an emerging artist from the Illinois Valley. He paints the beauty of God's creations and the things that make him think about life. His preferred medium is oil, but he also likes to draw with graphite and charcoal. He is going to pursue a career in art.

Stephanie Latty is a local artist based out of Granville, whose lifelong love for drawing and painting was instilled in her at an early age. She earned her Associates of Arts degree from Illinois Valley Community College in 2008. Majoring in the studio arts with a discipline in photography and graduated with a BS from Illinois State University in 2011. Her unique style of mixing acrylic ink and charcoal was born shortly afterward. She has always been fascinated with the randomness and unpredictability of splatter art, which is demonstrated in each of her pieces. The balance found between the randomness and uniqueness of the background paired with a structured and diligently drawn interior is the ultimate struggle and accomplishment. Her work encompasses a full spectrum of people, animals and nature.

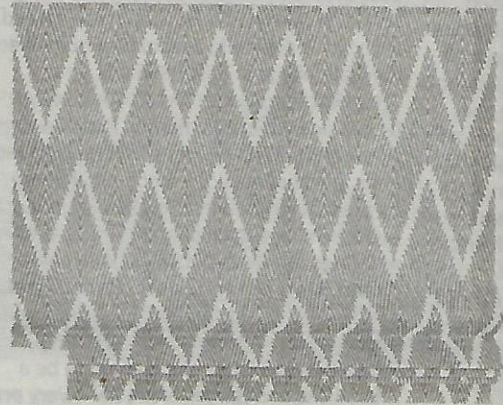

Vincent Fleming is a native of La Salle, who has been working with various mediums for many years. His preferred subjects are self-identification images and whimsical creatures as well as fantastical landscapes from the inner workings of his mind.
